

For immediate release
29 October 2004

BUSINESSES CAN JOIN FORCES TO STAMP OUT CRIME

Action Against Business Crime (AABC) is holding a special one-day conference in Nottingham on 17 November, to show how building relationships in the local community can help combat crime.

With all the key players in one room, those attending will have the rare opportunity to hear and question representatives from the Home Office, AABC and existing partnerships.

The conference will prove invaluable for those that are or could be involved in managing partnerships, from retailers and town centre managers through to police, community safety officers, CCTV systems managers and security consultancies.

AABC Chief Executive, Mike Schuck, said: "The benefits of partnerships are clear; a greater amount of information on criminals can be exchanged and knowledge and experience between coordinators and businesses can be shared.

"This conference will explore how crime partnerships can develop and improve through building relationships, increasing funding, exchanging information and ultimately delivering cost effective crime reduction solutions for communities. Furthermore, the conference provides an excellent opportunity for those working in partnerships across the UK to meet colleagues and exchange ideas."