Government's White Paper on 14-19 - NUT's further concerns

Commenting further on the White Paper on 14-19, Steve Sinnott, NUT General Secretary, said:

“The White Paper uses the language of Tomlinson but has a fundamentally different meaning. Tomlinson was about ensuring all young people had access to both academic and vocational learning.

“The Government has created one diploma for GCSEs and A levels and another for vocational learning. This re-branding does not disguise the fact that the academic/vocational divide has been widened rather than narrowed.”
